

REMEDIES:

The energetic frequencies of the following remedies are programmed into the Quantum, enabling us as practitioners to utilize a vast array of natural healing modalities.

Bach Flower

There are thirty-eight remedies that comprise the Bach Flower pharmacopoeia. They are derived from certain British wild flowers that are selected for their special ability to treat the personality and distressing emotions of the sufferer rather than the physical symptoms of illness. It is now known that an individual's emotional outlook influences the course, severity and duration of their disease. Therefore these remedies cure, not by attacking the disease but by flooding the system with beautiful vibrations.

Flower Essences

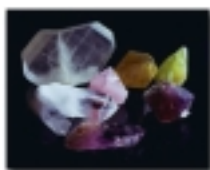

The Flower Essences are derived and utilized in the same fashion as the Bach Flower Remedies; however they are not restricted to only British grown flowers. The Flower essences are derived from flowers grown throughout the world.

Homeopathy

The basis of homeopathy is "like cures like". The symptoms which a substance can cause can also be cured by it when it is given in the right way. For example, arsenic causes diarrhea and weakness, accompanied by restlessness and anxiety. A homeopathic dose of arsenic can cure these same symptoms whether due to food poisoning, colitis or cholera. Homeopathic medicine does not treat the illness directly; it enables the body to do the necessary healing for itself. Because the remedy is similar to the disorder it can stimulate the body to respond to the disease and cure it.

Crystal Energies

Crystals emit unique frequencies which can influence the individual or environment they are in contact with. The very nature of crystals spontaneously increases the levels of harmony in their immediate environment. The introduction of a new frequency or element of order in a chaotic state always tends to increase overall orderliness because coherence is a much stronger force than chaos. Crystals are some of the most orderly matter in the universe, so utilizing crystal energy for an energy imbalance, whether it is physical illness or emotional and mental upset, can encourage our own healing process to become more effective.

Ayurveda

Ayurveda is a vast healing science utilizing philosophy, massage, Yoga, Tantra, diet, meditation, remedies and much more. We will focus on the remedies as these are the compounds we have available in the Quantum's Matrix. The pharmacology of Ayurveda is a vast science including thousands of medicines. Many are herbal and some use the healing properties of metals, gems and colors. The classic Ayurvedic texts state that all substances in nature have medicinal value when used in the proper manner. The purpose of these remedies is not to suppress symptoms of illness, as is common in Western medicine, but instead to bring out of balance elements in the body back into harmony eliminating disease.

Chinese Herbal Medicine

There are a total of fifty-nine meridians in the body, of which twelve are the "main" meridians and dominate the others. Each of the main meridians represents a biological energy system centered around one of the twelve vital organs. Qi flows from one meridian to another in a certain order until the entire network is covered, delivering vital energy to every part of the body. Chinese herbal medicine imparts its healing benefits to the body as much through the meridian complex as through the bloodstream. As with Ayurveda, Chinese herbal medicine utilizes philosophy, the universal principals of Yin and Yang, the five elements, etc... as part and parcel with the herbal remedies. Items for herbal prescriptions are therefore selected from these various categories to counteract causes and to relieve symptoms of disease.
